Saint Katherine Drexel

If your father is an international banker and you ride in a private railroad car, you are not likely to be drawn into a life of voluntary poverty. But if your mother opens your home to the poor three days each week and your father spends half an hour each evening in prayer, it is not impossible that you will devote your life to the poor and give away millions of dollars. Katharine Drexel did that. Born in Philadelphia in 1858, she had an excellent education and traveled widely. She grew up in a wealthy but faith filled home that taught that wealth was meant to be shared with those most in need.

Katharine had always been interested in the plight of the Indians, having been appalled by what she read in Helen Hunt Jackson's A Century of Dishonor. While on a European tour, she met Pope Leo XIII and asked him to send more missionaries to Wyoming for her friend Bishop James O'Connor. The pope replied, "Why don't you become a missionary?" His answer shocked her into considering new possibilities.

She wanted to join a contemplative order but after much discussion with Bishop O'Connor of Omaha, she wrote in 1889, "The feast of Saint remainder of my life to the Indians and the Colored." Seven Million!" She gave all of her money to the newspaper headlines screamed "Gives Up work of her new religious order."

After three and a half years of training, Mother Drexel and her first band of nuns— Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament for Indians and Colored—opened a boarding school in Santa Fe. A string of foundations followed. By 1942, she had a system of black Catholic schools in 13 states, plus 40 mission centers and 23 rural schools. Segregationists harassed her work, even burning a school in Pennsylvania. In all, she established 50 missions for Indians in 16 states. Her crowning achievement was the founding of Xavier University in New Orleans, the first Catholic university in the United States for African Americans.

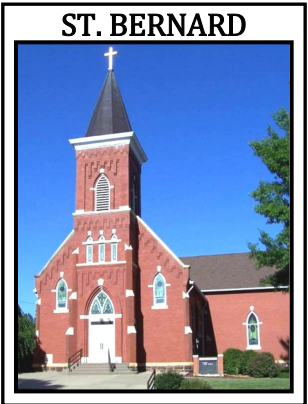

At 77, Mother Drexel suffered a heart attack and was forced to retire. She spent the next 20 years in quiet, intense prayer. Small notebooks and slips of paper record her various prayers, ceaseless aspirations, and meditations. She died at 96 and was canonized in 2000.
