St. Aloysius Gonzaga is the patron saint of Catholic young people because of how diligently he pursued holiness before his premature death. He was born in 1568 in northern Italy, the oldest son in an aristocratic family. His parents were insiders in royal courts in Italy and Spain. His father wanted Aloysius to become a decorated military leader, so at 4 years old they sent him to spend time with soldiers in camps. His tutors had to admonish him for the language he picked up from the troops. At around the age of 7 he began to dedicate himself to prayer devotions to Mary and Jesus. He spent much time praying, or in reading the lives of the saints. In fact, throughout his life, he had regular and intimate contact with other saints—he received his first communion from St. Charles Borromeo and had as a spiritual director St. Robert Bellarmine.

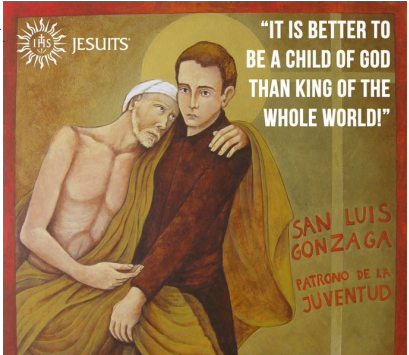

Because of his family’s position, he also spent time in the courts, among royalty. There he observed the intrigues of ambitious people with their lusts and de-cits. This awoke within him a desire for virtue, and he poured himself even more into prayer and service. When he was 11, he was struck with a disease of his kidneys, which caused him chronic indigestion and blessing because it afforded him more time for prayer stories inspired him to join the order to become a to the poor. He also began to live like a monk, even the night to pray the psalms & took on a rule of fasting.

His mother approved of his desire to join the Italy to meet local rulers & gave him roles & tasks friends of the family & even clergy to try to dissuade clear that nothing would change his mind, his father Rome. As a novice learning the rhythms of Jesuit life, prayer times were closely monitored. He was actually learn how to lead a balanced life. Aloysius had one pursued that relationship with all of his being.

He realized he had a privileged upbringing, and in an such as helping to wash dishes or clean. One day, in prayer, he came to understand that he did not have long to live. He fell more and more into deeper prayer and meditation, and when his peers saw him at meals, and recreation times, he seemed to be in some kind of ecstatic contemplation. In 1591, a plague swept Italy, and the Jesuits opened a hospital in Rome. Aloysius assisted the patients there, washing them and making their beds. He got sick himself, and was prepared to die when, against everyone’s expectations, he recovered. He ran a low fever for months afterwards, which kept him weak. He remained in prayer, and it was revealed to him that he would die on the feast of Corpus Christi.

In the days before his death, he seemed well enough to travel, and his superiors considered sending him to a nearby town for some task there. He replied with his conviction that his life would end soon. The night of his death, he asked his confessor to recite the prayers for the dying, though he didn’t seem to be ill at all. Then, late that night, his health suddenly changed and he died around midnight the night between June 20 and 21. He was only 23.

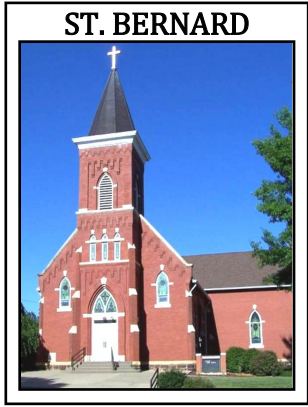

“I am a piece of twisted iron; I entered religious life to get twisted straight,” - St. Aloysius Gonzaga
